General Comment

Religion has no place in government, and especially not in any government-run medical program. Clearly, including contraception in preventive health services is important in maintaining women's control over our own reproductive decisions, which directly impact our entire professional and personal futures.

Letting a woman's employer circumvent women's very personal medical decisions in the name of the EMPLOYER'S religious beliefs is an affront to the Establishment Clause. as well as to our privacy rights.

Please don't let any religion-based objectors allow their agenda to infiltrate this rule.
