General Comment

Responsible investment portfolios are consistently shown to outperform other portfolios, so this proposed change is clearly not motivated by concern for the financial well-being of citizens. Also, whatever happened to limited government interference in the free market? This infringes on the rights of private citizens and entities to choose where their money goes. This whole proposal is nothing but a transparent attempt to override consumer preferences in order to redirect money to certain sectors that are close to the current administration, several of which would not even be financially viable today if it weren't for the government favoritism they currently receive.
