General Comment

Some of my friends at work have told me recently that pension fund managers are putting political goals before returns. I know this isnt good for my retirement, so Im frustrated that theyve decided to do it.

Ever since Ive heard about this ESG Ive researched it on the internet. I think its fine that companies are willing to engage in social causes and advocate for policies they believe in. But this should not come at the expense of my retirement account that Ive worked so hard to build.

If companies want to pursue ESG agendas, there are plenty of other ways for them to do it. ESG should be reserved for politics and politicians. I want my fund managers to focus on one thing, and thats making my retirement as best as they possibly can. Focusing ESG is not how they do that.

Ive worked my whole life to save up for retirement. Its not easy working long hours and then putting my hard-earned money into a pension fund only for it to be wasted on ESG projects. I hope the DOL finalizes the proposed rule to protect me from all this.

Sincerely,
Tabitha
