Dear Committee Members,

I would like to bring to your attention an inequity that exists in the current retirement system for former state employees that are now employed in federal positions. Currently if a former federal employee in the State of Florida accepts employment with the State, the State allows that employee to apply for retirement credit for their period of employment with the federal government. Federal employees should be granted an equal benefit, where credit for State employment is granted for Federal retirement. Currently a federal employee can purchase credit for former federal employment like military service and some type of 'purchase option' should be available for former State employment credit. Thank you for your time and consideration.....Dale
