General Comment

Average citizens that are convicted of illegal activity at work lose their jobs. Point blank period.

It should be the same for bankers and financial managers- no special exemption.

I can think of no other profession where logical hardworking people would be advocating for their fellow colleagues to continue representing their industry after committing crimes in said industry.

REALLY makes you wonder about the morals of the banking industry if this is how they represent their interests. Advocating for convicted criminals to remain active as their coworkers! When I as an average citizen think about that it makes my blood boil.

End the special treatment. If a cashier gets caught stealing they not only lose their job but they GO TO JAIL. Not only don't the bankers go to jail, they get to keep their jobs. For fraud far exceeding what the rest of us would already be in prison for.

Please make the obvious and ethical choice. All People Equal!

Sincere thanks to anyone reading this for taking the time. Happy Holidays!
