RECA Section 5 Employee Benefit Eligibility under the EEOICPA

Part B	Part E
Employees must file with the Department of Justice, Radiation Exposure Compensation Act (RECA) – Section 5	Part E is not dependent on your RECA claim. Part E claims will be adjudicated separately. If you are accepted under B for the condition – you are automatically accepted under Part E
If you are accepted under RECA, you are also accepted under EEOICPA. You receive $100,000.00 under RECA and awarded $50,000.00 under EEOICPA	Once you are accepted under Part E, you are eligible for impairment and wage loss compensation.
If you are denied under RECA, you are also denied under EEOICPA	The maximum compensation available under Part E is $250,000.00.

Dose Reconstruction & Probability of Causation

Part B eligibility for cancer is determined by:

- ▶ Membership in Special Exposure Cohort (SEC). Presumption that the diagnosed specified cancer was caused by radiation exposure during their eligible SEC employment.
- ▶ Dose reconstruction performed by the National Institute for Occupational Safety & Health (NIOSH). DOL uses the dose reconstruction to determine Probability of Causation (probability or likelihood that a cancer was caused by radiation exposure incurred by a covered employee in the performance of duty). POC must be above 50% for compensability.
- ▶ RECA Employees: Part E claims for cancers not accepted under RECA that are based on radiation exposure will undergo the dose reconstruction process described above to determine Part E eligibility.

Part E Causation

- The standard for establishing causation is whether it is at least as likely as not that exposure to a toxic substance at a DOE facility was a significant factor in aggravating, contributing to, or causing the illness or death.
- Causation under Part E may be established by an acceptance under Part B. Based on this acceptance, exposure and causation are presumed to already exist. This includes conditions accepted under Part B based on a DOJ award of RECA Section 5 benefits.
- Occupational History Interview conducted by Resource Center Staff
- Case development may include a review of employment records, Site Exposure Matrices (SEM) data, Industrial Hygienist review, Toxicologist review, review of DEEOIC Exposure & Causation Presumptions, and/or a request for a medical opinion.
- For Survivor claims, evidence must also establish that the condition contributed to the death of the employee before accepting the survivor claim under Part E.

Site Exposure Matrices (SEM)

- ▶ The SEM is a repository of information on toxic substances present at Department of Energy (DOE) and Radiation Exposure Compensation Act (RECA) sites covered under Part E.
 - Information in SEM is gathered from a variety of sources
 - Scientifically establishes links between toxic substances / illnesses
 - Training and Public access to SEM is available the DEEOIC website:
<https://www.dol.gov/owcp/energy/regs/compliance/seminfo.htm>
 - SEM contains a list of uranium mines and mills and the period each was in operation. SEM also identifies ore transporters covered under RECA Section 5. Additionally, the SEM “Site History” section, for each facility, lists all prime operating entities and respective operating dates.

- Similar process to initial claim but we may be able to use some of the previously collected evidence.
- RECA employees may file for additional illnesses under the EEOICPA at any time regardless of whether the condition(s) were accepted under RECA.

Consequential Conditions

- If it is determined that an accepted condition caused, contributed to, or aggravated a claimed consequential condition, the consequential condition will be accepted under the same part types as the accepted condition.
 - Medical benefits are typically awarded retroactive to the eligibility date of the accepted condition. Some exceptions may apply.
 - Acceptance of a consequential condition may also result in impairment and/or wage loss compensation eligibility under Part E.
 - Consequential conditions are accepted by Letter Decision issued by the District Office, no Final Decision is required.
